

THE CABINET.

Something of the Democratic Opinion With Reference to Mr. Cleveland's Advisers.

The announcement of Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet yesterday was well received by the local Democracy, and the opinion on all sides was freely expressed that he had called around him a class of men in whom the country as well as the party repose the utmost confidence. Some thought that the Cabinet officers could possibly have been better distributed, but no one appeared to feel the least doubt regarding the ability, the patriotism or the special fitness of Mr. Cleveland's advisers for the respective positions which they had been called upon to fill. With the exception of one or two, they are all men of long experience in public life and are confidently in the front rank of American statesmanship. The opinion prevails among the local Democracy that the selections of the President are an earnest to the people that his administration will be progressive, honest and economical.

It can not be denied that there were many citizens of Indianapolis, Republicans as well as Democrats, who hoped persistently to the last hour that Ex-Senator McDonald's name would at the last appear in the list. There is no question but the disappointment over his not being in the Cabinet is widespread in Indiana. Perhaps all the Democrats in the State Mr. McDonald feels the least disappointment, and the little he does feel, if any at all, is on account of his friends rather than for himself.

A Sentinel representative, with the list of appointees in hand, called on Mr. McDonald for an expression of opinion on the composition of the Cabinet. He had already seen the nominations. Being satisfied that the unofficial announcements published on Wednesday were authentic, he was not surprised at yesterday's confirmation of it. The President had exercised his undoubted right, he said, in making his selections, and so far as the material of which the Cabinet was composed, no well grounded objections could be made. Mr. McDonald thought that in geographical distribution the President had been less fortunate, and might expect more or less expressions of disappointment from the sections of the country that seem to have been neglected. The individual members of the Cabinet he pronounced men of acknowledged character, and held those of them with whom he was acquainted to be beyond question gentlemen of ability and integrity.

"You do not appear, Senator, to be suffering any personal disappointment from your name not appearing in the list of appointees," remarked the Sentinel.

"Then my appearance does not deserve," responded Mr. McDonald, with one of his hearty laughs. "I am profoundly grateful to my friends, especially to my late associates in Congress and the Democratic party of Indiana; for the earnestness with which they have pressed my name for a place in the Cabinet, and all that I have tendered me my acceptance would have been solely on their account so as not to disappoint them, and against my own inclination and interest."

"It has been repeatedly stated in the press that Mr. Hendricks has not favored your appointment. Have you any comments to make upon this?"

"Nothing that has heretofore appeared on that subject pro or con has been either uttered or inspired by me—and all that I have to say is that from the best information I have Mr. Hendricks has said nothing in my favor, though possibly nothing against me. In this respect his course has differed from that of every other leading Democrat of Indiana, so far as I know."

"What of President Cleveland's inauguration?"

"I am very much pleased with it. It was modest and brief, but full of earnest words, uttered by one who seemed fully conscious of the weighty responsibilities that were assuming and determined to devote his best energies to their faithful discharge."

AMUSEMENTS.

DICKSON'S GRAND OPERA HOUSE—"VICTOR DURAND."

There is no strain for effect in saying that the stage of the Grand furnished last evening the strongest play and the strongest cast that has been upon our boards this season. The play in less competent hands would be attractive; the company would give in a weaker play an admirable performance, but here we have most effective plot, scenery, situations and dialogue, and a galaxy of stars to interpret the thrilling characters the playwright gave to "Victor Durand."

The scenes are laid in Paris, and American people are prominent in the characters. "Ruth" (Miss Sophie Eyre), the eldest daughter of "John Vanclaire," a French noble, and "Henri Favart" (Mr. George Clarke) whom she had first met in Rome. "Ruth" had formerly been betrothed to "Paul Dean" (Mr. Fred Corbett), who, four years prior to her marriage, was assassinated on a train between Morocco and Paris, and so wounded on the head that he was placed in an asylum for the insane. "Baron de Mersac" (Mr. Newton Gottbold), an adventurer and polished villain, discovers in "Henri Favart" the person of "Victor Durand," who has been unjustly accused and convicted of the assassination of "Paul Dean" and sentenced to the galleys for life, but who had escaped after two years of imprisonment. "De Mersac" himself had committed the crime, but, intent upon obtaining of "Ruth," he comes into the happy circle at Paris, and denouncing "Favart" as an escaped convict, has him rearrested. Meantime "Septimus Severus Tubbs" (Mr. W. H. Denny), deeply involved in eye-glass, and half idiotic and love for "Violet," "Ruth's" younger sister, comes on a visit and demonstrating that he is not so big a fool as he looks to be, recalls having met "De Mersac" and his accomplice, "Antonio Siora" (Mr. Roland Buckstone), an Italian organ grinder, and by aid of certain findings in his diaries and otherwise, exposes the real criminal, and after a terrible ordeal for the innocent ones, establishes "Favart's" innocence.

Anything like an adequate recital of the ingenious, strong and entertaining situations can not here be essayed. Nor can anything less than an observation of the performance give a correct estimate of the exceeding force and grace of rendition of the several roles. The cast is a notable one, and such as is seldom seen grouped off the metropolitan boards. We can faithfully promise an unusual feast for all who may see "Victor Durand." The play runs the remainder of the week, including Saturday matinee.

"HEARTS OF OAK" AT ENGLISH'S.

Another fair-sized audience witnessed this beautiful drama of American life and grit at English's last night. "The Baby" still continues the absorbing object of interest with the fair sex. It is a plain but powerful drama, possessing beautiful scenery. Those who have not seen it should go before the week closes. Don't forget the matinee to-morrow at cheap prices.

Charles Thompson, supported by C. G. Craig and a good company, all of next week, in "Jane Eyre," "Phyllis," "Romeo and Juliet," "East Lynne"—a well selected repertoire of old and new plays. Popular prices.

NOTES.

Business at the Zoo continues large. The bill embraces both drama and variety.

Charlotte Thompson will be at English's all next week in a round of her popular plays.

The duet in "Victor Durand" is simply immense. His monotonous "an'other fellow" takes the house by storm.

"The best play and the best company of the season" is the universal verdict of everybody who saw "Victor Durand" at the Grand last night.

The return of Charlie Hoyt's laughing triumph, "A Rag Baby," to the Grand the first part of next week promises to be a most popular event.

The popular Dime Museum is filled to overflowing every afternoon and evening this week, and the show given is one of the best of the season.

The "Victor Durand" matinee at the Grand to-morrow afternoon will be played at popular prices—twenty-five and fifty cents, with seventy-five cents for reserved seats.

W. J. Fielding representing the Hanlon Brothers' "Fantasma" Company, which appears at the Grand the last part of next week, is in the city. He talks of joining Jim Cooke in a scheme to give a P. H. festival during the summer months.

The Russian Minister's Dispatches.

LONDON, March 5.—The dispatches handed Gladstone this afternoon by the Russian Ambassador were from the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, who denies Russian occupation of Akrobat, Zulefakar Pass and Sariyuz was designed to forestall the decisions of the Joint Commission on the Russo-Afghan frontier. He says the advance of the Russians upon Puli-Khatum was only ordered after the Afghans, in July last, during the negotiations for the organization of the commission, occupied Pendjeh, and in January they occupied Sariyuz, when the Afghans withdrew on the advance of the Russians. The Russian Minister does not maintain that Russia disputed the outpost, but refuses to withdraw until the Commission presents its report.
